Administration

Hail, Seniors of 1950

On June 2nd you, the members of the Class of 1950, leave forever as active undergraduate members, the portals of Wickliffe High School.

I wish you success in whatever endeavor you may undertake. May you consider graduation from High School not as the attainment of an education, but as only the beginning. You may find it advisable to increase your knowledge with further education in college, self instruction, on-the-job-training, and so on.

Make one of your outstanding personal traits that of getting along with others. Among the things necessary to make yourself pleasing to others are tolerance, a love for your fellow-man, willingness to be a good listener, and ability to be a good conversationalist.

Good health should be one of your treasured possessions. Guard it well through temperance in all you do.

May God's Blessing be with you always

Class Will

We, the Senior Class of Wickliffe High School, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fifty, being of sound mind and body do hereby declare this to be our last will and testament.

As members of this class, individually and collectively; we bequeath the following qualities:

Ella Mae Asbridge leaves her ability to eat-and-eat to JoAnn Funk.

Marilyn Bluhm leaves her snappy walk to Shirley Comer.

Donald Cox leaves his ability to help teachers to Calvin Green.

Anthony DiNero leaves his football uniform to Tom Miller.

Cyrille Fine leaves her quiet voice to Darlene Soltesz.

Anna Marie DeCamillo leaves her voice and laughter to Barbara Bauer.

Joan Clark leaves her presidential worries to next year's Senior class president.

Bob Fox leaves his physics textbook to Jim Vinch.

Bill Doud leaves his talent for drumming to Bill French.

Shirley Gaudere leaves her typing ability to Bob Halbert.

Nancy Homer leaves her smiles to Ruth Johnson.

Harry House leaves his happy-go-lucky manner to Dora Scipione.

Elaine Kinter leaves her qualities of leadership to Doug Harlick.

James Grimm leaves his careful driving technique to Bill Graw.

Richard Homer leaves his girl to some lucky Junior boy.

Joe Knapp gladly leaves his car to the driving classes.

Kathleen Markle leaves her long tresses to Marlene Martens.

Zane Nadolski leaves his "great height" to Nat Porter.

James Palermo leaves his way with the girls to you lucky Junior boys.

Carol Koenig leaves her ability to absorb Spanish to Rocco Ranallo.

Ralph Lafferty leaves his quiet, gentlemanly qualities to Doug Gilbert.

John Malko leaves his gentle voice to Victor Mezacapa.

Jane Roth leaves her natural blond bangs to Phyllis Laspina.

Jeanette Sabruno leaves her ability to get things done to Marie DiNero.

Larry Schartner leaves the families' new car to Bob Ross.

Mike Schaab leaves his red hair to John Worth.

Carol Reuss leaves her interest in sports to Betty Ehrenosky.

Alan Semark leaves his walk to Domenic Mazza.

Joan Wilkinson leaves her carefree manner to Alice Swaffield.

Bob Scott leaves his athletic ability to Edward Polly.

JoAnn Worth leaves her ability to come to school twice a week to David Gilbert.

Dick Wendt leaves his neatness to Charles Boss.

Shirley Stinziano leaves her amiable good nature to Frances DeCapua.

David Collins leaves his talent for drawing cartoons to anyone who thinks he can fill the position.

We, the Seniors, leave to the Junior Class first, the juke box in the cafeteria. Second, the editorship of next year's annual. And finally, our dignity and prestige and the right to be called Seniors next year.

We leave to the school, faculty and students our regrets that we will have no more time to spend with them.

We leave our thanks to Mr. Frischkorn for all his trouble.

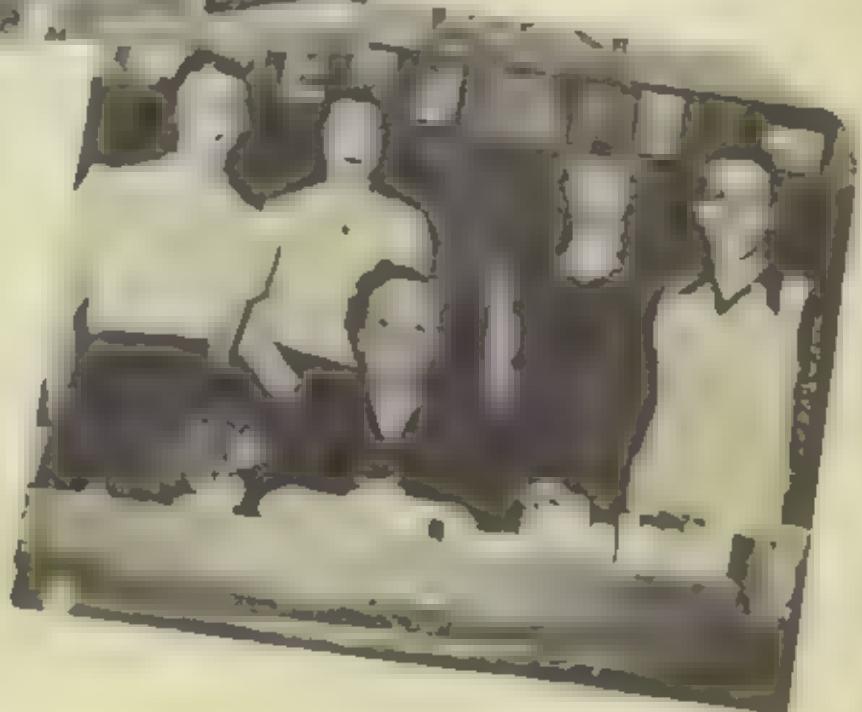

Lastly to each member of the faculty we leave our heartfelt good wishes and our thanks for having been such true and wise friends and advisors.

In witness whereof, we have here unto set our hand in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fifty.

Prophecy

Many years have passed since the day that I found the magic stream that lay concealed in the deepest part of the forest. It was there as I knelt beside it in that year of 1950 that the events of the years to come flashed before me. I recall the scenes now, as clearly as I did that day. The future years of the class of fifty marched before me.

The waters rippled. A large expensive store appeared. A lithe, lovely woman stood in the midst of the commotion. Ella Asbridge was now head buyer of Paris fashions at Sak's Fifth Avenue.

Another ripple stirred the waters and I saw nurses in crisp white uniforms silently walking the halls of St. Luke's hospital. I followed one to the offices of the Superintendent of Nurses. The door opened and I saw that Marilyn Bluhm had achieved a life long ambition.

As before the ripple passed and the water brought before me the picture of a University library. Through the imposing doors walked Joan Clark. Two of her dreams had become realities. She was head librarian at the University of Alaska.

The water cleared and I presumed nothing more was to appear. Suddenly an airplane shot into view. The pilot was none other than Captain Donald Cox flying for American Airlines.

The picture changed suddenly and I saw a studio with papers scattered about, crayons, pencils, paints tossed carelessly here and there. Truly this was an artist's, or better a cartoonist's studio. In the corner of the room sat David Collins. What is he drawing? Why of course, Dave is creating Lil' Abner now.

Then a lovely florist shop came into sight. The proprietor came to the door to speak to a customer and I recognized Anthony DiNero, now the owner of the DiNero Florist Shop.

I gazed more intently into the waters. A stage appeared, the lights dimmed, a spot was thrown-upon our own Bill Doud and his famous band the "Doudlebugs."

The scenes were changing rapidly now. An ultra-modern motor court came into view. The name over the entrance said "Cyrille Fine's Fancy Motor Court."

The waters suddenly became violent, bubbling with distaste. The change frightened me, but through the steam I saw a chemist's laboratory. The chemist with test tube in hand came toward me and Bob Fox's life work had been revealed to me.

The White House now appeared and, indeed, wonder filled my mind. Presently the door opened. In the president's chair sat our own Mike Schaap. A reporter was interviewing him, she looked up and I saw Carol Koenig, reporter for the "Washington Sun". A door to the left opened and Shirley Gamire came in. Shirley was now the private secretary to the President of the United States.

The water rippled again and a huge farm passed into view. A stately gentleman came toward me. The groups of people around him seemed to be examining the farm. The gentleman was obviously describing his scientific farm. Why of course, Jimmy Grimm was now the second Louis Bromfield living on his Malabar Farm in Mansfield.

I watched intently for the changing waters brought to me a picture of Nancy Homer in the act of signing a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Company for the coming season.

The picture switched swiftly to Miami, Florida. The lobby of a hotel flashed before me and a familiar face appeared. Joann Worth was the hostess of the exclusive and swanky summer resort "La Palms" owned and manager by millionaire Dick Homer.

Another gentle ripple of the water brought into sight a post office. The post master, a dignified gentleman, stood in the doorway, and I could distinguish Harry House's face. Oh yes, Harry has done well.

A momentary clearing of the water and then a school took form. A sign indicated that this was the very famous Cleveland Institute of Art. Blaine Kinter, the head instructor, came down the steps with one of her students whose parents were to be recognizable with those of Rembrandt, Larry Schartner.

The next scene took me to New Orleans where one no longer ate at "Antoine's" but at "The Alabamian." Three classmate were now connoisseurs of fine foods. Joe Knapp, John Melko and Zane Hadolski have out done Antoine himself.

The second led me to a lovely little cottage where two close friends were reminiscing. They looked up from their talking and I saw Kathleen Burke and Joan Wilkinson with their children about them.

The third scene presented to my eyes the local movie theater. The world premier of a movie starring two of our classmates was being held. Ah yes, Jimmy Falerno was now the most popular heart throb of the country and his leading lady, Jane Roth, made the pulse of every man alive beat twice as fast.

The next scenes rapidly succeeded one another. The first took me to Lafferty's Garage, now a chain of garages in five states. Ralph could be seen as head bookkeeper for his dad's business.

The water rippled and a camera was held up. A sudden flash, and Carol Weiss came from behind her camera. She had just finished a picture of Alan Alda, who was now modeling men's sport clothes for Esquire.

The waters became smooth and a classroom was shown. Before a sea of faces stood Jeanette Sabruno with a book of fairy tales in her hand. She was a kindergarten teacher at last.

The waters seemed to roar and a stadium filled into sight. A football game was underway. The Cleveland Browns versus the San Francisco Forty-Niners. The coach rose from the bench and I saw Bob Scott cheering his team on to victory.

Again the waters swiftly changed. The cover of Life Magazine loomed before me and I saw another familiar face. Shirley Stinziano was now one of the socialites in New York City. An inset on the cover showed that my classmate had made good. Dick Weitz, was now staff writer for Life.

Quiet water followed this scene. The waters stirred gently and a million dollar store came into sight. The grand opening was being held. The manager stepped forward. It was Agnese DeCamille about to make the opening day speech.

I looked once more into the waters. A sudden, white mist rose. The air cleared and the stream moved on reflecting only the shadows of the forest.
